MONDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 4, 1858

A THRILLING INCIDENT. During the examination of the cases of alleged frauds upon the Pension Office, at leged frauds upon the Pension Office, at Rechester, quite an exciting incident occurred. Captain Minor, a veteran of the war of 1812, a very intelligent old gentleman, was introduced as a witness. He was shown one of his old pay-rolls by Mr. Perkins, a cl-rk of the Pension Office at Washington, and asked if he recollected several of his soldiers whose names were pointed out to him upon it. He readily answered that he did.

Question by the District Attorney. Do you recoilect a soldier in your company by the name of Barrenger? Answer. I do, very well.

Question. Would you know that man

Answer. I do not think I should; it is a long time since I have seen him-more than forty years. Commissioner Conkling then called upon Barrenger, who was in the room among the witnesses from Tioga county, to stand up. He rose in a distant part of the room, stord firm and upright, in every respect a soldier, and bowed respectfully to his old captain, who, after viewing him for a moment, shook his head dubiously, and said, 'I do not recollect him," and added: 'Gentlemen, it is a long time since I have seen him. It is forty-six PHOSPHATES, years this very day since I led with my company the American army of three thousand men ioto Sackett's Harbor." In a moment, without regard to time or place, or the fitness of the occasion, a sponta-audience. There stood, unexpectedly to each | Magnesia..... other, the two old soldiers, face to face, who Sand and other insoluble matter 15.92 had, almost half a century ago, marched shoulder to shoulder to the frontier to defend their country from an invading foe. They had met now for the first time since then; and that upon the anniversary of that patriotic action. So sudden and sympathetic was the expression that the worthy Marshal, Col. Jewett, allowed his patriotism to get the start of his love of order and decorum, and forgot to rap with his usual promptness --And the face of the good-natured Commissioner, Mr. Conkling, seemed more smiling than ever. The last we saw of the old soldiers was after the adjournment of the court when they were together in the midst of a circle of recole fighting over their old battles .-- Utica Observer.

FROM PUNCH.

THEM'S OUR SENTIMENTS .- Owing to the variation of clocks and smartness of the citizens of the United States, it is now the middie of next week in New York. The banquet in honor of the laying of the Atlantic Cable has taken place, and we are enabled, by submarine telegraph, to furnish a list of some of the toasts and sentiments most enthusiastically received on this auspicious oc-

"Suum cuique.'-To the United States citizens who planned, made, and laid the Atlantic Telegraph, and to the British capitalists who subscribed a trifle towards it!"

"To the memory of the immortal Franklin, as discovered the lightning, and to Cyrus Field as greased it." "Christopher Columbus, whose discovery rendered possible the two great facts of the day-Shakspeare and the United States. "The immortal Shakspeare, raised in the would certainly have been a free and enlightened American citizen." "Hail to the American Eagle! may be pois himself above the broad Atlantic, with a wing apiece on England and Columbia, and his beak and tail pointing to the States of the Union vet to be.'

"Success to the British Lion as long as be is couchant; but if ever he becomes rampant may be be scourged by the star-spangled banner till he puts his tail between his legs and howls with anguish."

BULWER AND HIS PIPE.

Those who have read "Ernest Maltravers" will remember the allusions to the "favorite meerschaum" of the hero, in the early stage of the novel. The distinguished author of this work is now a Secretary of State, and is himself a far more inveterate smoker than any character described in his work. Indeed it would be difficult to find a man more devoted to the practice. Each Administration seems to have its smoker par excellence, and between Lord Clarendon and Sir E Bolwer Lytton, it would, perhaps, be impossible to decide which statesman consumes the most tobacco. Lord Palmerston, on the contrary, has such an aversion to it, that he wrote a sharp rebuke to the young attaches at Constantinople be cause the dispatches smelt of tobacco, and desired the ambassador to have the notice stuck up in his office, and to see that its injuctions were attended to: 'No smoking

Mary Eliza-beth Mills and James William Mills, are now living, and report to the Coart all the evidence he can obtain on this point and such other matters as are pertinent thereto. R. A.
